Lecture Organization

- Natural history of political parties in the U.S.
- Why do parties exist?
 - What explains varying levels of party cohesion
 - When are leaders “strong” and when are they “weak”?

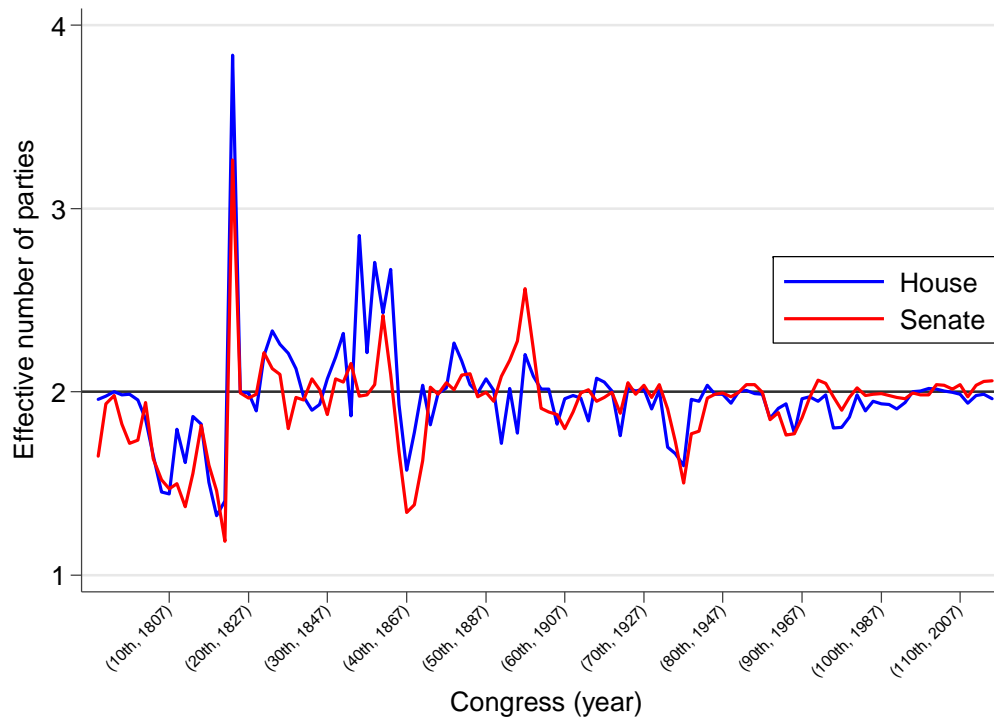

Interesting (and Important) Historical Aside

- Party membership originally arose in the chamber and spread to the electoral arena
- Now, party membership arises in the electoral arena and spreads to the institution
- Post-Gingrich world puts the emphasis back into institutions

Natural History of Political Parties

Period	Party of the “right”	Party of the “left”
1789—1823 (1 st —17 th Cong.)	Federalists	Republicans
1823—1837 (18 th —24 th Cong.)	Multifactionalism based on old party labels & new individual alliances
1837—1857 (25 th —34 th Cong.)	Whigs	Democrats
1857—present (35 th —115 th Cong.)	Republicans	Democrats

Current Organization of Congress

- Party responsibilities
 - Scheduling business
 - Distributing leadership among and within committees
 - Promoting attendance and spreading information
 - Facilitate bargaining
- Resources that parties possess
 - Knowledge of rules
 - Access to tangible benefits
 - Provide focal points (?)

Some notes about historical development

- Party control
 - Until roughly the Civil War, parties don't "organize" the chambers
 - After the Civil War, they do (first the House, then the Senate)
 - Even so, party control of committees is a 20th century phenomenon
- Over time formal party positions have proliferated and institutionalized
 - Institutionalization mostly a 20th century phenomenon

Note some things about historical development

- Regional/ideological balancing
- Emergence of career ladder

It would, doubtless, be considered quite improper to omit from an essay on the Senate all mention of the Senate's President; and yet there is very little to be said about the Vice-President of the United States. His position is one of anomalous insignificance and curious uncertainty. Apparently he is not, strictly speaking, a part of the legislature,—he is clearly not a member,—yet neither is he an officer of the executive. It is one of the remarkable things about him, that it is hard to find in sketching the government any proper place to discuss him. He comes in most naturally along with the Senate to which he is tacked; but he does not come in there for any great consideration. He is simply a judicial officer set to moderate the proceedings of an assembly whose rules he has had no voice in framing and can have no voice in changing. His official stature is not to be compared with that of the Speaker of the House of Representatives. So long as he is Vice-President, he is inseparable officially from the Senate; his importance consists in the fact that he may cease to be Vice-President. His chief dignity, next to presiding over the Senate, lies in the circumstance that he is awaiting the death or disability of the President. And the chief embarrassment in discussing his office is, that in explaining how little there is to be said about it one has evidently said all there is to say.

Why Do Parties Exist?

- Anomalous position of parties in spatial models of legislatures
 - The chamber median should rule. Party is just a label
 - Who governs? Do leaders “boss” followers (common view) or do followers terrorize leaders?

Some perspectives on this question

- Krehbiel: Where's the party?
- Rohde: Conditional party government
- Calvert: Parties coordinate
- Cox, and McCubbins: Parties form a “cartel” that protects against defeat
- Gamm & Smith in D&O: Coordination and centralization differ in the House and Senate

Evidence that Parties Push Members Apart

Snyder, and Stewart
(2001)

Further Evidence

Evidence of “cartel activity” from cut points

- If there is no agenda control, then...
 - Motions should be distributed ~ ideal points
 - Cut lines should be distributed ~ ideal points
 - The median should win the most often
- If the majority party keeps motions off the agenda that split the majority, then...
 - Motions will not be distributed ~ ideal points
 - Cut lines will not be distributed ~ ideal points
 - The members in the interval from the floor median to the majority median should win most often
