Video-Conferencing System

Evan Broder and C. Christoher Post

Introductory Digital Systems Laboratory

October 30, 2007

Abstract

The goal of this project is to create a video/audio conferencing system. Video will be captured from a camera and then processed using JPEG compression. The resulting compressed signal is then framed for serial transmission along with an audio signal and sent to the decoder with a checksum to ensure data integrity. The decoder then extracts the separate signals, reverses the JPEG compression, displays the resulting image on the screen, and outputs the audio to a speaker.