

Welcome to Recipeoria! We hope you've arrived hungry!

What's it like around here? Well, take three cups of a serious love of food, stir in $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of a desire to show others how to cook things, add a heaping teaspoon of getting amounts of ingredients exactly right (we argue constantly over whether there should be four or five cloves of garlic in something), and then add seasonings as needed from all over the world. Mix well, pour into a casserole dish, and then put the casserole dish away because this is only an analogy and you can't bake an analogy. But you get the idea.

We sure wish we could help you find the component for the Plot Device! It's been so long, nobody can even remember what that component is, much less where it is. But our friends in other regions tell us that you are a bunch of sharp cookies... those really fancy, lacy ones with a lot of butter and nutmeg... although, you know what, a little dash of lemon would really bring the range of tastes together... hmm, I think I've got a new recipe idea.

Wait, where was I? Oh right. Everybody thinks you'll figure out the component you need, and I believe them. Good luck! And if you get hungry along the way, we've got plenty of food to keep you going! (As long as you're willing to cook it yourself, that is.)

All the best,

The Mayor of Recipeoria