

Greetings, solvers!

I think there's no better way to welcome you to our erudite and well-organized community than to reproduce our entry in the Bookspace Gazetteer, verbatim:

Reference Point

This seaside promontory is noted for being both extended and extensive. Inhabitants are justly proud of its sandy beaches (the famed "Yellow Plages"), and its illumination-shedding lighthouse, which bears the inscription Vide Etiam ("See Also"). Its greatest claim to fame, however, is its inclusion in the ancient, canonical list of "Locations Wherein A Part Of The 'Plot Device' May Be Found."

Wow, good thing I looked that up! Given all the damage that has been done, you're probably interested in that Plot Device part. I'll be happy to get it for you, as soon as you can tell me which entry in "The Complete Directory Of Things We Have Around Here" I should look under.

Sincerely,

Loguequard, Catherine Olivia
