As Mr. Ziegfeld glorifies the American girl, so do we glorify the college comic. Our pages are crowded with the gayest things for which undergraduate minds are responsible. Ours is a national magazine carrying this exuberance to every corner of the world.

With the current issue we have attained a quality circulation in excess of a quarter of a million copies.

Among our contributors are George Jean Nathan, Wallace Irwin, Meredith Nicholson, H. C. Witwer, John T. McCutcheon, Arthur Somers Roche and Octavus Roy Cohen. By a series of articles, "The Men Who Make Our Comics", we are acquainting the public with the college editors.

COLLEGE HUMOR, issued five times in 1924, is priced at 35¢ a copy, or $1.50 a year. We invite your inspection of "The Best Comedy in America"!

Can You Propose Without Being Accepted?
That also is an accomplishment, says Joe.

Dear Editor:

You know the compelling influence of environment—a prom, a girl, moon and music. Sometimes, just the girl is all that is necessary. And what about this ever increasing popular sport of proposing—the girl might accept! Yet, some other time, when you feel in the mood, she might not accept. How to propose realistically and how to keep their acceptances and refusals in accord with your whims—immediate and future—is, I believe, the crux of a perfect line. And, I'm sure you'll be pleased to hear that I have achieved this perfection in my line from reading VANITY FAIR.

Just Try 10 Issues
In each issue you find:

THE STAGE: Photographs of the beautiful and the unique; reviews and storm warnings; symposiums on theatrical astronomy.

MOVIES: Stills and stories of the meritorious and the unusual. Press agents banned.

HUMOR: Works of poets and other tragedians; rare novels with a futuroistic flavoring; achievements of intellectual notables and notable intellectuals; the modernistic philosophies.

GRAVAMEN: Cream of humour and crème de menthe: the whimsical; the satirical; and all other forms of variegated grotesquerie.

WORLD OF IDEAS: Every new movement, every revolutionary viewpoint, every unique slant on this amusing world, is mirrored in Vanity Fair.

THE SPORTS: All of them—masculine, feminine and neuter—photographs, news items, and methods of play.

THE ARTS, AS SUCH: The best works of the new artists and the new works of the best ones; exhibition gossip and reproductions of the most discussed masterpieces of the season.

BRIDGE, ETC.: All the tricks and turns; how to get the most out of your college education.

AND IN ADDITION: All the latest notes in MUSIC, MEN'S FASHIONS, MOTORS, and DANCING—all you need to know, recklessly illustrated.

THE COUPON WILL SAVE YOU $1: Fill it in now—and—just watch your line.

A colored preacher rose to address his congregation one Sunday morning when he noticed a former fellow inmate of the penitentiary sitting in the front row. He realized the need for quick action and accordingly he gave out his text thus: “Ah takes mah text from de sixty-seventh chaptah ob de book ob Isaiah. ‘Dem what sees me heah, and know me, and doan say nuthin’, dem will ah see latah.”

To all forwards who are playing center

"The little fellow hasn't got the reach. Why don't they put him at forward where he belongs?" You have heard comment like that about some mis-positioned player.

Just look out they don't talk that way about you—not in athletics but in your field of work after college.

The world is full of doctors who should have been lawyers, and lawyers who should have been writers—men who can't do their best work because they haven't got the reach.

You still can avoid their haphazard choice of a career. Some earnest thinking on the subject, "What do I really want to do in life?" will help you decide right.

That's a real problem. Get all the advice you can—from the faculty, from alumni, from men in business. If you find you have made a false start, change now and save yourself a lot of grief—for once you graduate into a profession, the chances are you'll stay in it.

“Didn't your wife bawl you out last night when she woke up when you came home?”

“No, I fooled her. I stood in the hall an hour, delivered a lecture on ‘Civic Righteousness,' told a bedtime story, and sang three grand opera selections, and she thought she had forgotten to turn off the radio.”

One Lucky Strike Leads to Another

No man who smokes LUCKY STRIKES ever feels that he has smoked too much. He is satisfied but never sated.

He finds that the Toasted Process produces a flavor mild enough to be continuously enjoyed.

He doesn’t have to debate whether or not he ought to have another one, because he knows from experience that even if, in his private opinion, he sometimes smokes too many, he never has the sense of having smoked too much.

HONI SOIT

He had often seen her in the little front room on the second floor. Her remarkable beauty reminded him of the photographs of some of the Follies girls. Strange, but it appeared that she never worked. To be sure he had occasionally noticed the shadow of a masculine figure on the partly drawn shade — but let us hurry. He quickened his pace as he approached the street door leading to her room. Resolutely he ascended the creaky stairs. After a moment's hesitation in the hallway, he walked to her door and knocked timidly. A pleasant voice ordered him to enter. With a sigh of relief he pushed open the door and was welcomed by the smiling beauty. In a few moments he was seated at her side — gazing steadfastly into her dazzling eyes. She grasped his hands and cast her eyes downward. * * * * (denoting lapse of time).

At last he felt satisfied at having made her acquaintance and was ready to leave. Somewhat embarrassed, he questioned her,

"Combien?"

"Un dollar, monsieur."

He pressed a two-dollar bill into her hand and hastily made an exit.

"Ah," he exclaimed, as he was about to leave the house, "I must not forget this place." He glanced at the door: "No. 309 — Madam de Cognac, Manicure."

The Man and His Bowler Hat

The right shape for a bowler hat is the shape that is most becoming. This is true as regards hats in general, but particularly so with the bowler. From the fashion point of view there is a right and a wrong bowler as illustrated above. But even above the point of view of what is correct, it is essential that a bowler have the proportion in height, in the amount of depth, front and back, and in the width of brim which will make it most becoming to the face of the wearer. Since a bowler hat is becoming to almost every man, one need not be discouraged if the shapes to be found in one shop do not seem to suit, for there are always other shapes to be found in other shops. Like every other hat, it should be worn well down on the head. And when all is said and done, it is the hat for town wear in winter. From November to April every man passed his teens should take to the bowler, for with a dark blue or brown guard’s coat, a smart pair of slip-on gloves and a dark cashmere muffler, he is more properly dressed for the street than he would be in any other combination or turnout.

If you are interested in any question of dress or etiquette, write “The Well-Dressed Man” care the (Voo Doo) and your letter will receive prompt and careful attention. Do not fail to give accurate address.

A CYNICAL QUESTION

Smoke rings floating in the air —
Formed by my mouth
Out of me into the currents they are embarked.
Floating with the tide,
Twisting to the will of what they meet,
Rolling, stretching, writhing, fading,
Dissipating themselves longer and longer.
Lengthening and turning,
Thinner and yet more thin
Until they become just a part of the haze —

So, are not we all as rings of smoke?
Pushed into this life to twist and writhe
And eventually disappear?

HOW TRUE

A poet lived in years gone by,
A writer bold, whose dribbling lines
Had gained him much deserved renown.
Through well spent years he'd climbed aloft
Ascending straight the steps of fame,
And now, with life's prime full in sway,
The poet laureate of the land.

His fondest dream, his choicest work,
The active mind had made complete,
A story couched in living words,
Unprecedented work of art,
He gave the World. 'Twas well received
With much acclaim, and yet a few
Saw fit to scowl and liked it not.

Their power great was called to hear,
And brought the poet to the earth.
His visioned dreams of castles fell,
All shattered into thinnest air.
The World with sorrow shook its head,
The Fogies grinned and licked their jowls,
'Twas nothing new, always the same.

We read in last night's Transcript that a man married a girl by radio.
That is what we call "Broadcasting."

Headline in Boston Traveler: "Dog Face Monkey
Steers Ship." Evidently some people are not too choice as to their opinions of their superior officers!

Biology Prof says that three fourths of the people

You never go to bed in London all the time.

Local magistrate says that marriage is like a police court. It begins by courting and ends by courting.

Pete: I got pinched for speeding out at Wellesley last night.
Roleum: I suppose you got a summons to court?
Pete: Oh no, I wasn't pinched by a cop.
IMAGINATION

The moon is leading lady,
The sun is her leading man,
The stars are the bright footlights,
The orchestra, "pipes of Pan,"
The night is the final curtain,
That many times will fall.
The audience? I near forgot,
It is earth's people, all!

A WOIKING GOIL'S CONFESSION

Ah, woe is me! Jack has refused to marry me. Can it be that he doesn't understand? Last night, as we were seated on the old plush sofa before the glowing gas log in the fireplace, I begged him for the eighth time to become my husband. But cold-heartedly he turned me down. His excuses were only falsehoods designed to cool my ardor! Oh, why should he discard me thus and leave me in this pitiful condition? Why does he overlook the hardships with which I must face life if I am to be without him? Only eight months ago he pretended to be madly in love with me. And to think that I confided in him, placed faith in him — deceitful brute! To think that he wooed me and appeared to worship me, and yet had no intention of making me his wife! How I have been tortured by this suspense! How I have longed for this opportunity! Soon it will be too late. What will become of me? I care not — treacherous monster — horrible villain — you who have answered me for the eighth time, "I will not marry you." — Aw, this Leap Year stuff is all bunk!

TRUTH IN ADVERTISING

Isn't it funny
The way you
Always see merchants
Advertising something
Like this:
"Because of increased
Rent, We are Forced
To Close."
Or sometimes they
Try this one:
"On account of
Remodeling and
Repairing, We are Forced to Close."
And some even put
It over by saying
"Due to Lack of
Business, We are Forced To Close."
DAMMEM!
Why don't they
Be perfectly frank
And say:
"Inasmuch As We Are
In Poor Condition
We Are Forced To Clothes."

THAT'S OIL THERE IS . . .

There is altogether too much wrangling over this graft question. Stirred by the Oil Donation, six thousand four hundred and thirteen people have written to the Investigating Board suggesting matters about which they think there is something shady. All the inquiries are not given below:

Was the Department of Fisheries actually given charge of the White House gold fish?

Did Senator Hopp pay for that brass receptacle he was seen leaving the Capitol with last Thursday?

Two hundred pounds of ice were seen going into the White House last night. Does this mean that Coolidge is giving away Alaska to the Big Interests?

I have not received this month's bulletin from the Poultry Raising Branch of the Department of the Interior. Is that department undermined with graft?

The pint of strawberry jam I sent the President in January has not yet been acknowledged. Somebody made off with it, I know.

. . . This last from a Vermont admirer. As a matter of fact the whole thing has gone too far. Before long Congress will be afraid to give their salaries a five thousand dollar boost for fear of public opinion.

Cleveland man arrested for beating his wife was charged with “Punching his own meal ticket.”

“They told me that in France the girls will kiss almost anyone.”

“Didn’t you find it was true?”

“No, they will kiss anyone at all.”

The Eskimo climbed aloft and kicked vigorously in his uncomplaining bunk. He was swathed in robes, blankets and other nondescript articles. On his feet were huge rubber gum-shoes, while his head found shelter in a fur cap of tremendous proportions. The wind tore through the window, showering his bed with ice and sleet. He thought sympathetically of the frozen radiator, mentally promising to rub it down in the morning. Valiantly the man attempted to adjust himself with only the nose defying the elements. He had read somewhere that it was unsanitary to breath under the covers, but damn it—by morning there would be no nose. Under it went. But you see, he wasn’t a real Eskimo. Just an ordinary Tech student living in a fraternity house along the river.
REASON ENOUGH

Yes, people said he was a sour individual. The outstanding feature in his character was his dislike of women. He loathed them. In fact it was rumored that he was writing a book on the subject. Many of the village belles had tried to subjugate him by their charms, but without avail. He was deaf to all overtures from the sex that he despised. Beauty, intellect, vivacity — all held no charm for him. He would make friends readily with the men, but the women — Bah! Some evenings when all were gathered about the friendly little stove in Herb Higgin's grocery store he waxed eloquent on the topic. Could you blame him? He had been married six times!

2000 YEARS AGO AESOP SAID . . .

A kiss in the dark is worth two in the light.
He who hesitates enjoys it longer.
A drink in time calls for nine.
Opportunity knocks . . . retard your spark.

VACATION TYPES

Oh! Do you go to M. I. T.? I once knew a fellow who went to Boston University. Is that far from Technology? I know they use the same kind of notebooks. Oh, I've heard SO much about that wonderful factory — tell me all about it. And what's that humorous magazine they put out — HARPOON, is it? Oh yes, the Voo Doo. How stupid of me! I'd just love to read Voo Doo — oh, HONESTLY, will you send me a copy? That's awfully thoughtful of you! And I hear that TECH SHOW is simply adorable. Isn't it strange — I expect to be in Boston just when they are performing. And do you have a Junior Prom? I know I'd just love to dance with so many Tech men. Their conversation is so interesting — they seem to know all about art and literature. Oh, is it an engineering school? My uncle used to be an engineer, but the company he was working for fired him — the Boston and Maine R.R. is SO fussy, you know. And . . . etc., etc., etc. — ad infinitum.

The most unfortunate student at the Institute is the fellow who has a front seat at an Economics lecture and is at the same time afflicted with insomnia.

ON A VALENTINE

(For Venus, mother of Cupid)
Fairest Goddess of Spring and Love,
Beauty, born of the foam,
Beloved by thee are swan and dore,
In slumbrous vales, thine home.
'Twould be quite vain for a mortal,
If one should seek to avoid
The conquests of thy winged son,
For he would be annoyed.
Unerringly he would take aim,
With very sharpest dart.
That small, but mighty, God of Love,
Would pierce the stubborn heart.

SILHOUETTE

A black cat
On the white snow
Winked his yellow eyes
And solemnly padded
Across my path.
It was a pen-and-ink sketch
Of superstition.
I thought no more of it
Until my doorway reached
I found your longed-for letter.

Challenger: Huh! Call yourself champeen! Why, for ten cents I'll knock your block off.
Champ: Yeah, that 'ud look like a big purse to you.
While our coat is with the tailor getting cleaned we will use the time our confinement affords to launch another attack at the administrative powers. This time we peevishly regret that the members of the faculty have no coats worth ruining. We wish they had and were made to wear them to class and park them as best they could. After they had found themselves trampling on their own coats in an attempt to find their hats a few times, they might realize why Tech students look so frowsy. Let us pause here and answer the bright student piping up, “How about the lockers?” All right, how about them? In the first place, no one but a drunken commuter will pay one-fifty for a leaky tin closet in the cellar. And in the second place there would not be enough to go around if we were all fools enough to sign up for them. Unquestionably every room at Tech needs a coat-rack and if the Institute Committee can momentarily forget the business of admiring itself, we may some day see these “luxuries” installed. Meanwhile, we won’t wear any coat to school by way of principle.

The other day Mrs. Umpty Umpty was described as having a Gothic mouth and a lorgnette. What brevity! What admirable conciseness! In a few words we have a picture of an elderly person of about fifty-eight, height five feet eleven inches, weight possibly two hundred sixty pounds, and an inverse temperature coefficient. The great contrast reminds us of some of the Institute textbooks in which our professors have successfully attempted to conceal what gems of knowledge our thirsting minds might assimilate could we but find them. Saying nothing in a great length of time has now become a profession, one of the first requirements of which is a tremendous gold watch chain. At regular intervals of one-half hour the lecturer will unhook his fingers from the chain and apparently examine his watch, until at the end of two hours we firmly believe the hands are stationary. Some of these men we listen to in order to appreciate, or possibly to study, their personalities. Others we let live because after it’s all over the diplomas will be distributed, or peppermint canes to the children, or something similar. These are therefore more appreciated because they have been worked for. It is just the same as when we glean a moment’s time from our scientific reflections and pay fifty cents to see Lucy Lush in “Simpering Love.” We know that before we can enjoy Lucy’s thrilling rescue from the burning building by Paul Philton, a clerk in her father’s grocery store, we must first sit through some unmusical gyrations by the orchestra, patiently read “Fun from the Press,” watch the caperings of Mutt and Jeff, and sleep through a dance by Theodore and Julia Trovskoski, two Russian dancers who were unable to secure employment elsewhere. Given a free hand in these matters Phosphorous could regulate the universe so as to save one-third of the time of the average individual. Sure this “putting on dog”, as it is called, is not yielding to public demand. Murdering a few well designated people would conserve as much time for the world as phonetic spelling has for those of us who are blessed neither with dictionaries nor with well educated stenographers.

Among the many activities that the Technology Student enjoys, there is probably none in which he indulges with more relish than in Corridor Smoking. Just why the Tech man singles out this for his favorite, it is difficult to imagine. If our faculty had tyrannically ruled that we should not smoke in the buildings, pure perversity might dictate that we do. But the ruling does not come directly from the faculty without the agreement of the student body. The authorities tried that, but found it unsuccessful. So they did the more logical thing and turned to the Institute Committee for help. The signs in the corridors explicitly state that YOU ARE REQUESTED NOT TO SMOKE IN THE CORRIDORS by request of the Faculty and the Institute Committee. Certainly we cannot dodge the issue by complaining of unfairness. And we are a weak crowd if we fail to conform with the dictates of a body elected by the school for our own legislative work.

Perhaps we are taking the whole situation too seriously. In fact, on second thought, it is not a matter of direct disobedience. It is more likely a matter of laxity on the part of the fellows. If every man will check up on his friend’s compliance with the regulation, smoking in the halls will soon cease.

Vol. VI No. 6
DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

My Gawd! Mabul —
Can you imagine
Such people?
I never realized
That such things
Were possible
And yet when
I was riding
Home on the subway last night
There it was
Before my very eyes
Imagine — right
Out in a public
Place — a big poster
“People Have Been
Sleeping in FAWLTY
PAJAMAS since 1889.”

I say, old thing, this is a dance, not a golf party.
Well, at least I’m keeping the ball rolling.

THE SEA

I think that there can never be
A sight more lovely than the sea,
As Dawn with rose-gifts comes to greet
The smiling blues beneath his feet.
The sea that chants in low deep tones
Of opal foam-bits to the stones.
The sea so like a lover strong
To whom the east and west belong.
The whispering waves the coral caves
And sirens wait to make men slaves.
While through the night it calls to me;
God’s changing wondrous blue-green sea!

CRAB

Tommy was a crew-man
And a young Chicago swell,
Hazel called him “retiring”
’Cause he crawled into his shell.

An American student married a ballet dancer in Holland and was in “Dutch” the rest of his life.
WHAT MEN WILL WEAR

With spring fast approaching, the vital question of what men will wear is again one of the least important issues of the day. It is with pride that we announce no radical changes in the cut of underclothing. Besides, what difference does it make? It doesn’t show. In all probability shirts will be worn—particularly around the edges of the cuffs. Plain white and colored shirts with six buttons will predominate. Those who patronize the Wun Day Laundry will no doubt be forced to be content with the buttonless, black-striped variety. Trousers will be cut long and wide with a special bag for the knees, except for those gentlemen who prefer the otherwise. They will also be shaped for those whose legs are patterned after the parenthesis design. An innovation is the new sleeveless vest which will not be worn over the shirt as heretofore, but under the coat. Coats will not be worn any longer than the rest of the suit, provided they are of the same material. Shoes, neckties and sox will be worn in the same places, but for evening wear, pajamas will be most popular. For formal evening wear, pajamas will also be most popular.

(An apology to our women readers: We regret that our column on “What Women Will Wear” was too short to appear in print.)

DIRTY DIGS No. 89725940

She cuddled closer to him on the morris chair. Why shouldn't she? He was only a college student, but his father was president of five or six railroads, owner of two or three coal mines, director of a few banks, etc. Of course she didn't know that but anyhow — They had to kill time in some respectable way, so they picked on the family album. His interest increased as his eyes fell upon the strange assortment of freakish faces.

"Who is that dignified old gentleman, Jane, dear?"
"Oh, that's my great grandfather. He was one of the original gold-diggers."

"And who's that pleasant looking rough-neck?"
"That's grandfather. He followed in his father's footsteps and was also killed while mining gold."

"How remarkable! And who is that healthy looking consumptive on the opposite page?"
"Oh, you mean Uncle John! He was killed in the gold rush of '49." (Rough, elderly man enters room, interrupting the post-mortem.)

"Oh, Frank, I want you to meet father. He has just returned from a gold-digging expedition in Alaska."

"Delighted, I'm sure, Mr. Goldust. Isn't it remarkable how the family trade has been upheld by the present generation?"

And now he wonders why she threw him down.

A FATHER'S ADVICE

Dear Son:

Hitch your wagon to a star and let everything you do amount to something.

YOUR LOVING FATHER.

Dear Father:

I couldn't get a star but I got one of the chorus. She didn't amount to much but what I did amounted to the following:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Taxis</td>
<td>$34.95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Candy</td>
<td>19.50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flowers</td>
<td>27.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dinners</td>
<td>42.50</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Let's have some more advice.

YOUR LOVING SON.

The many naughty girls I've known,
I cheerfully forget,
But, oh, a few I did not meet
I think of with regret!
OUR VERY OWN BLUE LAW SUGGESTIONS

Inasmuch as in all walks of life a certain respected Few must always see fit to call objectionable those things which please the majority, it seems only right to bow in fullest conformance with their opinions. Human nature is at best avaricious and evil, and this nature finding expression through the sentiments and tastes of the greater number, it must necessarily follow that the aforementioned very, very small minority are infallible. Moreover, it is only logical that this Few, deeming themselves on higher elevation than the common herd, are therefore divinities with self-imposed halos, and should have control over the ignorant and pernicious tendencies of the unprincipled multitude. Yielding thus to the wide spread and popular demand for higher standards among our great American colleges and institutions, Phosphorous, not to be found wanting, submits the following suggestions for immediate adoption by Society:

A. As concerns Smoking. The use of tobacco as a substitute for opium and mouthwash, coming, as it does, under those actions which are ascribed to our Personal Liberty, in view of the fact that our Constitution guarantees us this Liberty, it should be abolished.

B. As concerns Drinking. It being a natural desire of Man to imbibe occasionally, or more than occasionally, and having previously determined that all human desires are vicious and of a low moral character, it is the duty of Society to abolish this privilege.

C. As concerns Women. As Women are a constant source of controversy between men, and inasmuch as men find pleasure in associating with them, this desire can be construed as both human and natural and therefore we should exterminate all women. (How could we in all fairness abolish tobacco and liquor and yet leave Woman, the greatest source of trouble at large?)

D. As concerns Existence. Not being to blame for our presence on Earth, although said presence is directly responsible for the wrongs of Society, inasmuch as there is a law against self-extermination, we are not at liberty to remove ourselves. Existence is therefore permissible.

APOSTROPHE

I miss you —
I miss your sweet
Well-rounded form, —
That dear expectant mouth
Whenever I
Seek to give you
Some small token —
Dear Wastebasket,
I miss you, damn it!

"But, my dear, surely you were cold out there on the lake?"
"Oh no, Aunty, John rapt his gaze around me."

He: Say, you look like a million tonight.
She: (demurely) I know but I'm only twenty-eight.
BY CANDLELIGHT

By candlelight a master cameo you seem to be,
Serene in fair nobility, a perfect joy to me.
By candlelight I build dream castles
In the depths of your treasured blue eyes,
And my heart fairly bursts as with happy song
I send my prayer to the skies.
By candlelight my dearest hope
Is a golden reality.
May my heart beat as one with yours —
And I mean a little to you,
Of what you have meant to me.

PHILBERT FLAMPTON, noted ornithologist, indoor game hunter, and collector of antique lawn mowers, lived with his wife and their twenty children in the palatial Flampton mansion in South Boston. One evening about three A.M., after his customary dinner of Bermuda onions and raw butter-milk, Flampton left the house ostensibly for the purpose of purchasing some second hand pipe cleaners. He was never seen again, but two weeks later his wife received anonymously through the mail an unripe cantaloupe with a glazed center. A Chicago woman wrote that she had seen a man looking distinctly unlike Flampton gazing in the window of a hairdressing parlor, just three months after his disappearance. But the police could find no evidence of the missing man. Was he alive or afflicted with anesthesia? McHenry tells this novel in his own excruciating, uninteresting manner. For this he was sent to prison

Roger Bacon may not have invented gunpowder, as has been claimed by some biographers of the famous Franciscan friar, but he exploded some of the outstanding errors of thirteenth century thought. Because of his advanced teachings, Bacon spent many years of his life in prison.

In an age of abstract speculation he boldly asserted the mathematical basis of all the sciences. But even mathematical calculation, he showed, must be verified by experiment, which discovers truths that speculation could never reach.

In the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company, Bacon's principles are followed in every experimental investigation. The gas-filled electric lamp and the electron tube were worked out on paper, but it was experimental verification of the underlying mathematical theory that made electric illumination, radio broadcasting and X-rays what they are today.

Duofold converts the 'Die Hards,' too
—the men who think all fountain pens are alike

Its Size and Balance and 25-year Point put fresh inspiration into everyone's writing

YOU know the "Die Hards"—the fellows who believe all fountain pens are alike. They either never owned a Class A pen, or have four or five cheap pens rattling around in their desks.

They had no affection for alarm clocks either, until Big Ben came along and woke them up. And when Gillette first took the morning murder out of shaving, the "Die Hards" were the last to cheer the safety razor.

But there's one good thing about the "Die Hards"—they can be convinced if you show them. So whenever one of their number starts to expound his theory about fountain pens, just pull out this black-tipped lacquer-red Duofold and give him a taste of the fresh inspiration that Geo. S. Parker has put into every-day writing.

Even the hardest "Die Hard" will own up he never swung a pen with Duofold's inspiring balance—that he never saw one with Duofold's classic shapeliness and beauty.

He'll catch the new idea when you tell him this Chinese lacquer-red color makes Duofold a hard pen to lose—that its size and symmetry give it a friendly feel in the hand. And he can't write his signature without admitting that Duofold's polished Iridium point (guaranteed 25 years for wear and mechanical perfection) is the smoothest thing that ever slid over paper.

He'll like the capacity of the Over-size ink barrel. And when you show how the Ink-tight Duo-sleeve Cap fits with micrometric precision so the Duofold can't leak, the chances are 10 to 1 that he'll soon head for the nearest pen counter.

After all, the Parker Duofold gives the biggest thrill to men and women whom ordinary pens can't stir. That's why good pen counters sell Parker Duofold on 30 days' approval—knowing that day by day this classic grows on everyone.

If you don't own the Duofold already, get this super-pen before the "Die Hards" beat you to it.
