Dear Students,

This spring, dive into an exploration of large-scale, big-impact projects with Professor Joe Sussman in Project Evaluation and Management! Using contemporary examples "ripped from the headlines", such as Keystone XL, you will leave subject 1.011 with a fundamental understanding of how to evaluate projects and manage their implementation. Students investigate these projects from financial, societal, economic development, social equity and environmental points of view. In the second half of the semester, students collaborate in the study of a large-scale project in teams of two on a term project. We’re now offering a graduate version of this subject, 1.S980.

Watch the preview below:

Interested to learn more information? Email cee-apo@mit.edu.

Best,
ONE@MIT HQ