

WOMEN

building

PEACE

— What They Do,
— Why It Matters

Sanam Naraghi Anderlini's latest book, "Women Building Peace: What They Do, Why it Matters," continues her ground-breaking exploration of gender and conflict. A longtime consultant to the U.N. and NGOs on these issues, Anderlini has produced several important field studies and analyses of how women build and sustain peace in their war-torn countries and communities, often in unconventional ways.

Sanam Naraghi Anderlini was born and raised in Iran and educated at Cambridge University in the U.K. She has held leadership posts with International Alert, Women Waging Peace, and is now, in addition to her consultancies, a Research Affiliate of MIT's Center for International Studies.

Friday, March 14, 2008
MIT's Stata Center
32 Vassar St, Cambridge, MA
32-124
10:30am-12pm

Send a photo of this code or text 11 to qc@mit.edu
for more information
(your phone can do this!)

For more information, please contact Annie Abbondante at 617-253-8306 or aca@mit.edu

Co-sponsored by the Center for International Studies and the Technology and Culture Forum