A donation to the IRDF directly impacts the experience of MIT Students by:

- Supporting $16M in low-interest loans for capital projects—the largest amount in IRDF history
- Providing annual educational operating grants valuing more than $400K to directly benefit every FSILG
- Funding annual support for FSILG Safety & Licensing and Insurance programs
- Upgrading all FSILG houses with state-of-the-art computer networks and fiber optic connections to MIT campus
- Financing the two largest renovations in IRDF history at Sigma Chi and Phi Beta Epsilon

Join our tradition of over 800 annual donors and 50 years of service to MIT

What Funding Does the IRDF Offer?

IRDF Construction Loans
Since the 1960s, this program has offered long-term low-interest loans that FSILGs can use for major capital improvements and renovations. More than 100 loans have been issued.

IRDF Educational Project Grants
In 1997, MIT launched this program to reimburse FSILG projects which improved educational areas and made the FSILGs more accessible to students with disabilities.

IRDF Educational Operating Grants
Established in 2004, every FSILG has taken advantage of this program to support operating expenses related to educational activities.

IRDF Community Wide Grants
The newest of the four programs, community-wide grants focus on improved safety, network connectivity, and new municipal regulations that apply to all FSILGs.

Does My Gift to the IRDF Make a Difference?
Absolutely. For FSILGs to thrive, they need the financial flexibility to keep their properties welcoming, accessible, up-to-date, and safe—and that’s just what the IRDF funds are for.

Last year the IRDF issued a record $6.2M in loans. Every FSILG has benefited from a loan or grant, and two top-to-bottom construction projects were completed for Phi Beta Epsilon and Sigma Chi.

Why give to the IRDF instead of directly to my FSILG?
All gifts to FSILGs help—whether given directly to the FSILG or via MIT’s IRDF program. An IRDF gift, however, is a gift to MIT and is therefore fully tax-deductible and counts towards reunion and class totals. It also qualifies for most corporate matching gift programs. All IRDF and “direct” donors are also highlighted on the Alumni Association website.

There’s no place like home.
The living environment of a student significantly affects the college experience. The IRDF helps sustain and improve the living conditions of current and future MIT students, so they may “pay it forward” someday as well. Just as every FSILG depends on the participation and goodwill of its members, the IRDF depends on the generosity of alumni who believe that the FSILG experience is impactful to its members and integral to MIT as a whole.
