Acknowledgments

Baan, president of Baan; and Bill Gates, president of Microsoft Corp. In addition to these, I must thank the thousands of executives I see each year at Cambridge Technology Group seminars. Hearing all of their questions and concerns has allowed me to see the patterns that inspired the framework of this book.

The third group of people that deserves recognition are those individuals who supported me in the research and writing of this book: Michael Meyer, who was in charge of the project; Massimo Chiocca and Anthony Salas, who made contributions to the technical substance; and Sharon McSweeney, Jared Willey, and Christopher Willis, who organized the visual content. I would also like to recognize the rest of the readers and editors of the book, including Alix Ewert, Meredith Brehm, Michael Wei, Aryeh Primus, Walid Negm, Anand Daga, William Lathrop, Rahma Salie, and Lane Beebe.

I thank my wife, Linda, for her support and acknowledge the contributions that her Harvard doctoral research made to the business models contained within.

Special recognition to my son, colleague, and friend, John J. Donovan, Jr. who co-authored Chapters 7 and 8. As co-author, his name appears on the front cover concealed below mine.