So don't be a lonelygirl (or boy) - come get some free hugs and mack on some cupcakes, because we're never gonna give you up!

Hello and welcome to MIT. Before you become engrossed in your classes, you should definitely make the most of your time on campus. The best place to start is by making sure that you make a well-informed decision about where to live. I know you've heard a million times about how your dorm will be your home at MIT; that it's important to choose a place with people you like. Well, it's true. If it's 4 a.m. and you're trying to finish your problem set, you'll appreciate help from upperclassmen more than the amenities of the building.

You may have already found your perfect dorm. Congratulations! But don't let that stop you from further exploring the other dorms with an open mind. At least you'll meet some great people. Who knows, you might find a place you like better.

Go to all the events! Enjoy yourself! Above all, remember that finding a great place to live is one of the most important decisions you'll make while you're at MIT. Take the time to make a good choice. The Housing Readjustment Lottery closes at 4 p.m. on Tuesday.

Sandhya L. Ramakrishnan '10
Dormitory Council REX Chair

First of all, even though I'm sure you've heard it a lot already, welcome to MIT! I hope you'll love your time here as much as I have.

Your freshman year is, hands down, the best time to explore the campus and meet people. During the next week, all I can say is: don't sleep. Ever.

There are tons of events going on (somehow, East Campus seems to have over 300...) at all hours of the day and night. Drop by as many as you can, hang out, and meet new people. No matter how great your temporary housing is, you should get out and visit every place on and off campus.

Don't be dissuaded by overly-rowdy dorms either; believe it or not, all MIT students have to do work, and just because dorm X plays 120 dB music the whole week, doesn't mean they do so during the normal year. If you love the place, stay there.

If there's one thing you shouldn't do during this week, it's worry about classes. As crazy as MIT can be, your first semester really is meant to ease you into the school.

So get out there, check out all the dorms, and have fun!
