Abstract: We propose a two-orbital Hubbard model on an emergent corrugated honeycomb lattice to describe the low-energy physics of graphene superlattices. Our model provides a theoretical basis for studying metal-insulator transition, Landau level degeneracy lifting and superconductivity that are recently observed in twisted bilayer graphene.