

sonification listening up

sound installment on MIT building 54 in collaboration with the atmospheric sciences group at MIT haystack observatory

carrie bodle

project duration: september 9-16th with daily soundings from 12-1pm

sound-off / closing event:
friday, september 16th 5-7pm

south facade of building 54

map url: [http://whereis.mit.edu/
map.jpg?selection=
54&Buildings=go](http://whereis.mit.edu/map.jpg?selection=54&Buildings=go)

sonification / listening up is a multi-speaker sound installment on MIT's building 54 broadcasting audio representations of sound waves embedded in the earth's charged upper atmosphere, or ionosphere. sonification / listening up is done in collaboration with dr. phil erickson of the atmospheric sciences group at MIT haystack observatory.

bodle is a graduate of the mit visual arts program '05
cbodle@mit.edu

funded by:
MIT office of the provost,
MIT vice president for research and associate provost,
MIT associate provost for the arts, MIT department of architecture, MIT visual arts program, and council for the arts at MIT ↙ facade installation by NE cleaning