MIT UNDERGRADUATE ASSOCIATION

Hey undergrads,

Spooky season is almost upon us! To celebrate, UA Events will be holding a study break at 4-6pm tomorrow on Kresge Oval. We'll have pumpkins to paint, cider and donuts to snack on, and flash tattoos to put a little sparkle in the spookiest day of the year.

MIT Music and Theater Arts presents Everybody by Branden Jacobs-Jenkins. Directed by Anna Kohler and performed by student actors from MIT. Branden Jacobs-Jenkins' 201k play, "Everybody," follows the stages of man as he/she/us moves away from original sin--and pride and avarice--to acceptance and love, but not without its share of laughter and fun. A morality tale with laughs, "Everybody" tells us who we are as we become who we are meant to be.

The advent of quantum mechanics a century ago overturned the deterministic assumptions of classical physics and seemed to put randomness and uncertainty at its core. Neither the determinism of the old paradigm nor the randomness of the new one seem conducive to the ancient idea of free will. What exactly is free will and does physics, of any stripe, leave any more room for it? This talk is a continuation of a series featuring the Thomistic Institute, which is devoted to strengthening the intellectual formation of Christians. There will be refreshments following the talk.
