THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY FOR THE STUDY OF NARRATIVE

The International Society for the Study of Narrative (ISSN) is a nonprofit association of scholars dedicated to the investigation of narrative, its elements, techniques, and forms; its relations to other modes of discourse; and its power and influence in cultures past and present.

“Narrative” for us is a category that may include the novel, epic poetry, history, biography, autobiography, film, the graphic arts, music, performance, legal writing, medical case histories, and more.

The Society sponsors the International Conference on Narrative each year. The first conference was held at Ohio State University in 1986, and in subsequent years, the meeting has been held at sites across the United States, Canada, and Europe. At each conference, approximately 350 speakers address issues of narrative from a variety of positions and perspectives.

There are currently approximately a thousand members in ISSN, and new members are always welcome. Membership in the Society includes a subscription to Narrative (winner of the 1993 award for Best New Journal from the Council of Editors of Learned Journals), as well as to the Society’s newsletter, which contains information about the annual conference, MLA sessions, the online discussion group, and other activities. For more information about the ISSN, please visit our web site at: http://narrative.georgetown.edu.

AWARDS: CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

2015 PERKINS PRIZE AWARD ANNOUNCEMENT

Established in 1994, the Perkins Prize honors Barbara Perkins and George Perkins, the founders of both The Journal of Narrative Technique and the Society itself. The prize, awarded to the book making the most significant contribution to the study of narrative in a given year, consists of $1,000 plus a contribution of $500 toward expenses for the winning author to attend the Narrative Conference where the award will be presented.

The Perkins Prize is conceived as a book prize rather than an author prize. Thus all books on the topic of narrative, whether edited collections, collaboratively written books, or monographs, are eligible to compete. If an edited collection or collaboratively written book is selected, the prize goes to the editor(s) or the collaborators. The winner of the competition for books published in 2013 will be announced at the Vancouver MLA Convention in 2015, and the prize will be presented at the Narrative Conference in Chicago in March 2015.

To nominate books with a copyright date of 2013, please send an email with “Perkins Prize” in the subject line to the Chair of the judging committee: Emma Kafalenos <emkafale@wustl.edu>. Publisher, third-party, and self-nominations are appropriate. Please indicate in the email whether the publisher, the author, or the Chair of the judging committee is to be responsible for ensuring that books are sent to the judges. Copies of books must be sent to each of the three judges. The deadline for nominations and for receipt of books by the judges is June 1, 2014.

Books should be sent by authors or their publishers directly to each of the three members of the judging committee:

- Brian McHale

  The Ohio State University
  164 W. 17th Ave.
  Columbus OH 43210

- Marie-Laure Ryan

BEST GRADUATE STUDENT ESSAY

All graduate students who present papers at the conference are invited to compete for the prize for the best graduate student essay. The winner will receive a copy of a Perkins Prize-winning book of his or her choice and will be encouraged to expand the winning paper for consideration by Narrative. In addition, the 2014 award winner will be eligible for $500 toward expenses to attend the 2015 conference.

Submit papers electronically as attachments (Word or PDF) to both of the judges: Kay Young <kayyoung@english.ucsb.edu> and Paul Wake <p.wake@mmu.ac.uk>. Papers must be received by May 1, 2014.

Papers must be unrevised conference presentations. While formatting changes, correction of typos, and the addition of a Works Cited page are acceptable, changes to the substance of the argument are not.
Hayden White is Distinguished Professor Emeritus at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and Professor of Comparative Literature at Stanford University. He has published extensively and provocatively as a theorist and critic of historiography, including Metahistory (1973), Tropics of Discourse (1978), The Content of the Form (1987), and Figural Realism (1999), as well as his collection of essays, The Fiction of Narrative (2010). His work has carried the field of literary narrative study into historical scholarship, emphasizing the status of historical writing as discourse, and its consequent negotiation with formal qualities of genre, plot, agency, figuration, and causality. In highlighting the artifice of historiography, he has made explicit the ideological and ethical commitments inherent in its formal choices, and the rigor of this narratological and literary critique of historical writing has in turn generated rich insights into the core issues of narrative theory itself. Many of his essays are essential reference points in narrative theory, notably “The Historical Text as Literary Artifact” (1974); “The Value of Narrativity in the Representation of Reality” (1980); “The Question of Narrative in Contemporary Historical Theory” (1984); “Historical Emplotment and the Problem of Truth” (1992); and “Auerbach’s Literary History: Figural Causation and Modernist Historicism” (1996).
Leslie Bow is the Mark and Elisabeth Eccles Professor of English and Asian American Studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, where she specializes in the representation of Asian Americans in literature, popular media, and visual culture. She is the author of the award-winning Partly Colored: Asian Americans and Racial Anomaly in the Segregated South (New York University Press, 2010) and Betrayal and Other Acts of Subversion: Feminism, Sexual Politics, Asian American Women's Literature (Princeton University Press, 2001). She is the editor of a scholarly reissue of Fiona Cheong's novel, The Scent of the Gods (Illinois University Press, 2010) and the four-volume Asian American Feminisms (Routledge, 2012). Her work has appeared in the Utne Reader, the Michigan Quarterly Review, and the Southern Review as well as in numerous academic anthologies and journals such as the Journal of Asian American Studies, Signs, American Literary History, and Cultural Critique. She is a regular contributor to Progressive magazine as well as to the Progressive Media Project, through which her op-ed columns on issues of race and gender appear in newspapers across the United States.

She has served as Director of Asian American Studies at the University of Wisconsin and on the editorial board of American Literature, the Executive Committee of the Modern Language Association, Division on Asian American Literature, and numerous committees of the Association for Asian American Studies. She is on the editorial board of Contemporary Women Writers and the advisory board of the Society for the Study of American Women Writers. She has been named Exceptional Professor, recognized for Excellence in Teaching, and received a UW System Outstanding Women of Color in Education Award, in addition to being nominated for Professor of the Year and Excellence in Mentoring.

She is currently researching the intersection between race and fantasy. The increasingly metaphoric depiction of social injustice produces a specific paradox: advocating for minority rights where no minorities actually appear. Fantasy—whether in the form of CGI, fetish objects, or children's picture books—allows for the simultaneous invocation and disavowal of race in the public sphere. Her project examines the veiled saturation of racial signs in imaginary depictions of social hierarchy in order to understand the utility of fantasy in American culture in general and its implications for Asian Americans in particular.
Ruth Perry is Ann Friedlander Professor of Humanities in the Literature Faculty at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Her books include Women, Letters, and the Novel (1980); Mothering the Mind: Twelve Studies of Writers and Their Silent Partners (1985); an edition of George Ballard’s 1752 Several Ladies of Great Britain (1984); The Celebrated Mary Astell (1986); Novel Relations: The Transformation of Kinship in English Culture and Literature 1748-1818 (2004), and a scholarly edition of Charlotte Lennox’s 1758 Henrietta (2008). She also guest edited a special double issue on “Ballads and Songs in the Eighteenth Century” for The Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation in 2006, complete with musical illustrations, some of which she recorded herself.

She was the founding director of the Women’s Studies program at MIT, and in 2000 she was elected president of the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies. The author of numerous books and articles, many reprinted in anthologies, she has written on canonical figures such as Pope, Sterne, Richardson, and Austen as well as on contemporary women writers such as Grace Paley and Mary Gordon. She has been awarded grants by the NEH and the NSF for projects on the social context of science, as well as fellowships from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, the Bunting Institute, the Guggenheim Foundation, the American Council of Learned Societies, the Rockefeller Foundation at Bellagio, and most recently a senior NEH research fellowship. She has also been honored as a MacVicar fellow at MIT in recognition of her contributions to undergraduate teaching.

She is writing a biography of Anna Gordon, Mrs. Brown of Falkland, an eighteenth-century source of traditional ballads, and collecting her own essays on Jane Austen into a volume. She is a folksinger herself, and her current research and teaching interests include the history of collecting, preserving, and performing folk music – particularly in eighteenth-century Scotland.
Priscilla Wald is Professor of English and Women’s Studies at Duke University. She is the author of Contagious: Cultures, Carriers, and the Outbreak Narrative (2008) and Constituting Americans: Cultural Anxiety and Narrative Form (1995). Her essays have appeared in the Oxford Encyclopedia of the History of Science, Medicine, and Technology in America; American Quarterly; American Literary Studies; The Cambridge History of the American Novel; The Lancet; PMLA; New Literary History; The Cambridge Companion to Jewish American Literature; The Cambridge Companion to 19th-Century American Women’s Writing; Signs: A Journal of Women in Culture and Society; Social Text; boundary 2; and Cultures of United States Imperialism. She is coeditor of a book series on nineteenth-century American literature at NYU Press, and she co-edited with Michael Elliott the recently released Oxford History of the Novel in English: The American Novel 1870-1940 (vol. 6). She is the editor of American Literature as well as on the Editorial Board of Literature and Medicine, Chair of the Faculty Board of Duke University Press, and on the Advisory Board of the Centre for Humanities and Medicine at the University of Hong Kong. She has served on the Executive Council of the Modern Language Association and is currently the MLA representative to the American Council of Learned Societies; she recently completed a term as President of the American Studies Association and formerly served on the National Council of the American Studies Association. She has a secondary appointment in Women’s Studies, is on the steering committee of ISIS (Information Sciences + Information Studies) and is a member of the Institute for Genome Sciences and Policy and an affiliate of the Trent Center for Bioethics and Medical Humanities and the Institute for Global Health.

She is currently at work on a book-length study entitled Human Being After Genocide. This work chronicles the challenge to conceptions of human being that emerged from scientific and technological innovation in the wake of the Second World War and from the social and political thought of that period, which addressed the geopolitical transformations that followed the war and decolonization movements. The trajectory of the book moves from these challenges through the rise of science fiction and the theory of “biopolitics” to the mapping of the human genome and its consequences. She is especially interested in analyzing how information emerging from research in the genome sciences circulates through mainstream media and popular culture and how the language, narratives and images in those media register and promote a particular understanding of the science that is steeped in (often misleading) cultural biases and assumptions.
Preconference Reception

Please join us for a preconference reception the evening before the conference begins. Complimentary hors d’oeuvres and soft drinks will be provided, and drink tickets for beer and wine are included in your conference packet. Registration packets will be available for pickup.
