

John Prensner and Sarah Barbrow

AUGUST 13, 2011

A Love Story in Puzzles

As many of you know, John proposed to Sarah by sending her on a scavenger hunt all around their apartment to find pieces of a final message. When she finished, she discovered she had the completed message "Will you marry me?" Of course, she said yes and here we all are today.

In honor of this, I have constructed a set of wedding puzzles for the bride and groom at their request. Feel free to work on this with some friends or enjoy yourself. There are nine regular puzzles and then a final tenth puzzle to tie everything together. You shouldn't need any references or the internet – but if you want to use a smart phone, no one will judge you! It is also very possible to complete the final puzzle without doing all of the first nine, so feel free to skip around and do the puzzles you enjoy most.

Connecting To Each Other

Many are the bonds that connect Sarah Barbrow and John Prensner. Even their names can be connected by building three four letter word ladders, changing only one letter per rung. The clues on the right will help you fill in the blanks. When you're done, take the labeled letters in alphabetical order to discover what John and Sarah will be after they are fully connected.

Barbrow Barcode

Just like Sarah's last name, all of the words in the following word search start with the word bar. However, in the grid, the symbol — has replaced the letters b-a-r anytime they appear in the word. For example, if Sarah's last name were in the grid (and it's not), it would appear as —BROW. Can you find all 21 words? When you're finished, the remaining letters will spell the start of a common wedding phrase. Complete the phrase to get the answer to the puzzle.

ANSWER: _____

Prensner Voodoo

John's last name is almost a palindrome – the same word forwards and backwards – save for that pesky p on the end. Can you determine six other almost-palindromes? For example, Cole slaw or potato salad would clue SIDEDISH, which is a palindrome with an extra H. Take the extra letters (not including the example) to get the answer – something John has been for the last eight months.

Example: Cole slaw or potato salad

State Change

While Sarah and John both grew up in Massachusetts, they didn't meet until they moved to Michigan. That's not as big a move as you might think – after all, MA to MI is just exchanging an A for an I. Using the clues below, discover some other words that only differ by exchanging an A for an I. For example, Take down in football and Giggle inducing touch would lead to the answer TACKLE/TICKLE. Read down the first letter of the answers below to learn where you might find Sarah, regardless of what state she's in.

Connect the Celebrity Marriages

Sarah and John may not be international super stars on stage and screen, but they are celebrities to all of us today. Below are number of other celebrities displayed in a seemingly random array. If two people in the array of names below have been married, connect their two dots with a straight line. Not all of the dots will be connected to another dot – even if the celebrity has been married, their spouse may not be listed. Other celebrities may have multiple marriages represented below. For example, Elizabeth Taylor was married to seven men – three of which can be found below. Once you connect all the appropriate dots together, the lines you've drawn in should spell out your answer – something similar to what you might eat for dessert today.

ANSWER: _____

It's De-Lovely!

Sarah and John have picked Cole Porter's "It's De-Lovely" as their wedding song. Everyone knows "de" words speckled through de song... "It's de-lightful, it's de-licious, it's de-lectable, it's de-lirious, it's di-lemma, it's de-limit, it's de-luxe, it's de-lovely!" But not everyone knows about de words Cole Porter didn't use. Each word below can either be parsed as a single word or two words with a completely different meaning. (De first word is always de same.) After you de-code them, de highlighted letters will tell you what John and Sarah might do after they dance.

Winning Her Heart

Sarah spent a few of her summers way up north of the Arctic circle in Alaska. While she loved her time there, it did mean spending summers without John. To find out what John did to ensure Sarah's return to him, take the answers to the previous puzzles and write them on the appropriate blanks below. Then, transfer the letters to the grid to reveal the message.
